THANKSGIVING.

In the dim and ancient forest lie the leafless trees and golden.

And the lonely crow is calling from the meadow's sere tree.

And I hear the bells' sweet cadence as they tell the story olden.

How we got our first Thanksgiving from the man who crossed the sea.

How the Pilgrim Fathers gathered 'neath the dark skies of November.

With the painted savage crouching like a lion for his prey.

How they thanked God for the harvest let the country long remember.

And cherish unto latest time our first Thanksgiving Day.

Today the bells are ringing in the fair Thanks-giving morn.

And all the land is thankful for the blessings from on high.

And happy and smiling peace the whole land are adorning.

And over all is bending now the autumn's cloudless sky.

From ocean unto ocean vast a harvest of great splendor.

By Freedom's sturdy yeomanry has gathered been again.

And over all the starry flag, that never shall lack defender.

Is waving in its glory where the mountain meets the plain.

Thus from the small beginning in New England's forest olden.

Grew the sweet and sacred custom which we keep with love today.

And the memories of that morning when deep in the forest golden.

Met the humble Pilgrim Fathers will remain with us for aye.

'Tis the gentle rains of summer and the winter's spotless snow.

And the larches and the cedars shadows o'er their graves are throwing.

Who kept the first Thanksgiving in the autumn long ago.

Marching ever on to glory is our heaven-guarded Nation.

With Columbia leading forward 'neath the banner of the free.

Destined in the ranks of Honor to acquire the highest station.

Breathing all the angry tempests like a rock that dars the sea.

Hail the sweet Thanksgiving mornings that shall ever be reminding us.

Of the glorious birth of freedom and the liberty we love.

The thoughts that are unmanly we have put for ever behind us.

Pressing onward, ever onward with the cloudless sky above.

Let the glad bells tell the story how across the racing ocean.

To the fairest land of freedom came the little Pilgrim band.

Fleeing from a harsh oppression, from the old world's not uncommon.

To plant the tree of Liberty in fair Columbia's land.

They gave us our Thanksgiving in the woodland grim and hoary.

They thanked the watchful Father, as the land thanks him today.

And the millions lift their voices in the ever-living story.

Of the first Thanksgiving morning in the wild-wood cold and gray.
